DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-7 and 23-35 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Carlisle et al. in view of Kawan.

Carlisle et al. shows all of the limitations of the claims except for specifying a remote host.

Carlisle et al. shows an i Carlisle et al. shows mproved systems and methods applicable to smart cards in a point-of-sale environment are described in FIGS. 1-14. In general, the point-of-sale transactions work in the following manner. A card holder (i.e., a consumer) selects a plurality of consumer items to be purchased and brings them to a point-of-sale configuration which includes a smart card reader. The consumer items each include a conventional Universal Price Code (UPC) bar code identifier, which may be conceptualized as an item identifier. The consumer inserts the smart card into the smart card reader, thereby activating a sequence of operations for debiting a plurality of accounts. The operational sequence implements the following functions. The Universal Price Code (UPC) of the consumer item to be purchased, i.e., the item identifier, is read by an item identification device, for example, by scanning the bar code of the item or by entering the code manually into a keypad at the point-of-sale terminal. Based upon the UPC code and one or more application identifiers held on the smart card, the point-of-sale terminal compares the UPC against item tables stored in memory which identify the item's eligibility for debit against one or more of the card holder's accounts. If an item is eligible for more than one account, a debit priority algorithm determines which of the accounts should be debited. The debit priority algorithm may utilize one or more debt allocation tables which, for each of a plurality of item identifiers, sets forth a priority ranking for a plurality of accounts. The comparison of item UPC codes for purchased items to UPC codes stored in the item arrays can be done as the UPC code of each item is entered at the point-of-sale terminal. Alternatively, UPC codes for each individual item can be buffered until all items for a given point-of-sale transaction are entered. The individual items are then debited into individual accounts. Additionally, the card holder is provided with the ability to mix account balance categories (dollars, specific item identification, item quantity, etc.) on a single card for a single transaction corresponding to a plurality of accounts. The functions described in the previous paragraphs will be described in greater detail hereinafter. First, the software operating system of the smart card will be considered.

Kawan teaches a wireless transaction and information system where the smart card and a remote host work in concert together in order to improve security.

Based on the teaching of Kawan, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art, at the time the invention was made, to modify the Carlisle et al. invention to incorporate the remote host of Kawan in order to improve security.

Conclusion

Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
